THE LANGUAGE OF FLOWERS.

“The gentle flowers
Retired, and stooping o’er the wilderness,
Talked of humility, and peace, and love.”

ROBERT POLLOK.

OVER what barren spot is it, reader, that the “gentle flowers” shed, with most effect, their sanctifying influence? Is it not over that moral “wilderness,” the heart of man, that they “stoop,” and “talk of humility, and peace, and love,” till the stony places become fruitful, and produce abundantly, good thoughts, pure wishes, and holy desires and aspirations; till the sterile waste changes to a garden? It is, and none that have ever truly listened to their eloquent preaching, have ever turned away unimproved and uninstructed, for :—

“From the first bud, whose verdant head
The winter’s lingering tempest braves,
To those, which ’mid the foliage dead,
Shrink latest to their annual graves;
All are for use, for health, for pleasure given,
All speak, in various ways, the bounteous hand of Heaven.”

CHARLOTTE SMITH.

These are the sentiments of a pure mind and a lofty imagination, and the authoress of the following words may well claim sisterhood with her from whom they emanated :—“And who dare say that flowers do not speak a language, a clear and intelligible language? Ask WORDSWORTH, for to him they have spoken, until they excited ‘thoughts that lie too deep for tears;’ ask CHAUCER, for he held companionship with them in the meadows; ask any of the poets, ancient or modern. Observe them, reader, love them, linger over them, and ask your own heart if they do not speak, affection, benevolence, and piety?” In confirmation of this, we also quote some stanzas from another poet, whose volumes, as this authoress truly observes, “are like a beautiful country, diversified with woods, meadows, heaths, and flower-gardens* :”—

“Bowling adorers of the gale,
Ye cowslips delicately pale,
 Upraise your loaded stems ;
Unfold your cups in splendour speak !
Who decked you with that ruddy streak,
 And gilt your golden gems ?

Violets, sweet tenants of the shade,
In purple’s richest pride arrayed,
 Your errand here fulfil ;
Go, bid the artist’s simple stain
Your lustre imitate in vain,
 And match your Maker’s skill.

Daisies, ye flowers of lowly birth,
Embroiderers of the carpet earth,
 That stud the velvet sod,
Open to Spring’s refreshing air,
In sweetest, smiling bloom, declare
 Your Maker, and my God.”

JOHN CLARE.

Verily, it was well said, that “Solomon in all his glory was not arrayed like one of these ;” and well was it continued, by a lately depart-

* Flora Domestica,

ed poet, "and Solomon, in all his wisdom never taught more wholesome lessons than these silent monitors convey to a thoughtful mind and an understanding heart."* "There are two books," says SIR THOMAS BROWNE, "from whence I collect my divinity; besides that written one of God, another of His servant nature, that universal and public manuscript that lies expanded unto the eyes of all. Those who never saw Him in one have discovered Him in another. This was the scripture and theology of the heathens; the natural motion of the sun made them more admire Him than its supernatural station did the children of Israel; the ordinary effects of nature wrought more admiration in them, than in the other all his miracles. Surely the heathens knew better how to join and read these mystical letters, than we Christians, who cast a more careless eye on these common hieroglyphies, and disdain to suck divinity from the flowers of nature."

* Southey.

Oh, yes ! be sure—

“The simple flowers and streams
Are social and benevolent, and he
Who holdeth converse in their language pure,
Roaming amid them at the cool of day,
Shall find, like him who Eden's garden drest,
The Maker there, to teach the listening heart.”
MRS. SIGOURNEY.

“Flowers,” says MR. PHILLIPS,* “formed a principal feature in symbolical language, which is the most ancient, as well as the most natural, of all languages.” It was an easy transition, after they had come to be regarded as proofs and manifestations of divine love, goodness, and protection, to make them the signs and symbols of human feelings and passions ; hence hopes, fears, and desires, joys and sorrows, and all the sentiments and emotions which sway and agitate the soul of man, have had their appropriate expression in these mute, yet eloquent letters of the blooming “alphabet of creation :”—

• Flora Historica.

By all those token flowers that tell
What words ean ne'er express so well."

BYRON.

Sings the poet of our day, adjuring his mistress to believe in his truth and fidelity, and so, though in somewhat different words, might have sung, and very likely did sing, the Israelite of old on the flowery banks of Jordan, the Babylonian in his hanging gardens, or the swarthy son of Egypt, who, kneeling by the mysterious Nile, might have plucked the blossom of the bright nymphaea, and putting it to his lips, and turning to the earthly idol of his adoration, have said :—

"The lotus flower, whose leaves I now
Kiss silently,
Far more than words ean tell thee how
I worship thee!"—MOORE.

This may be considered by some of our readers a fanciful theory, but surely it has as good foundations for its support, as many an hypothesis which has attained universal approbation and credit : in a piece entitled

"Floral Ceremonies," the antiquity of the use of flowers, are fully proved, as ornaments and adjuncts to splendour and enjoyment, on festive and other occasions, and as they were so used and appropriated, we may well believe in their extended application, as symbols of passion and sentiment. But little need we imagine will there be, for proof of this ; all who really love flowers ; who delight in them as the sweetest characters which appear on the pages of the book of nature, ever spread out for their instruction, will at once coincide in our opinion. and say, without pausing to examine what PLINY has said upon this subject, to decipher the Egyptian hieroglyphics, or to compare the floral alphabet of the effeminate Chinese, with that of the voluptuous Turk, or the more refined and classic Greek,—

"Have not flowers a language ? speak, young rose,
Speak, bashful sister of the footless dell !
Thy blooming loves—thy sweet regards disclose ;
Oh speak ! for many a legend keep'st thou well ;
Tales of old wars—crusading knights who fell,
And bade thee minister their latest sighs !
Speak, grey-haired daisy ! ancient primrose tell !

Ye vernal harps ! ye sylvan melodies !
Speak poets of the fields ! rapt gazers on the skies !

* * * * *

Ye poetry of woods ! romance of fields !
 Nature's imagination bodied bright !
 Earth's floral page, that high instruction yields !—
 For not, oh, not alone to charm our sight, Gave God your blooming forms, your leaves of light ?
 Ye speaking a language which we yet may learn—
 A divination of mysterious might !
 And glorious thoughts may angel eyes discern Flower-writ in mead and vale, where'er man's footsteps turn."

CHARLES SWAIN.

"When nature laughs out in all the triumph of spring, it may be said, without a metaphor, that, in her thousand varieties of flowers, we see the sweetest of her smiles ; that, through them, we comprehend the exultation of her joys : and that, by them, she wafts her songs of thanksgiving to the heaven above her, which repays her tribute of gratitude with looks of love. Yes, flowers have their language. Theirs is an oratory, that speaks in perfumed silence, and there is tenderness, and passion, and even the light-heartedness of mirth in the variegated beauty of their vocabulary. To the poetical mind, they are not mute to each other; to the pious, they are not mute to their Creator.....No spoken word can approach to the delicacy of sentiment to be inferred from a flower seasonably offered, the softest impression may thus be conveyed without offence, and even profound grief alleviated, at a moment when the most tuneful voice would grate harshly on the ear, and when the stricken soul can be soothed only by unbroken silence."* Thus writes,—

A true professor of the gentle art,
Deep read in that sweet lore, which well he teaches,
A mystic language perfect in each part,
Made up of bright-hued thoughts, and perfumed
speeches;
A goodly book he hath, wherefrom to draw
His texts and lessons; on its living pages
We gaze in wonder, not unmixed with awe,
Reading the records of long-vanished ages:
Bright are the characters, and fair the forms,
And sweet the sounds before us, and around us;

* Language of flowers.

A gentle ardour every bosom warms.

As though a dreamy spell entranced and bound
us,

Hopes and affections, feelings and delights,

In bright embodiment stand out before us,
All that allures the spirit and delights

The soul, while seraph music floateth o'er us.
Oh, wondrous tongue. Oh, language of the flowers!

Writ in that volume rich with nature's treasures,

With poesy deep hid in leafy bowers

Thy teacher walks 'mid thickly scattered pleasures ;

And down the shady lanes, and in the fields,

And through the garden he his pupil taketh,
Marking each blossom which instruction yields,
And all that in the bosom thought awaketh."

H. G. A.

But let us recur to the words of this "Professor of the gentle art," and evidence their truth by a few examples shewing the effect of "floral language" upon a mind stricken with grief. Listen to PHILASTER :—

"I have a boy,
Sent by the gods, I hope, to this intent,

Not yet seen in the court. Hunting the buck,
I found him sitting by a fountain's side,
Of which he borrowed some to quench his thirst,
And paid the nymph again as much in tears :
A garland lay him by, made by himself
Of many several flowers, bred in the bay,
Stuck in that mystic order, that the rareness Delighted me. But ever when he turned
His tender eyes upon 'em, he would weep,
As if he meant to make 'em grow again,
Seeing such pretty helpless innocenee
Dwell in his face, I asked him all his story.
He told me that his parents gentle died,
Leaving him to the merey of the fields,
Which gave him roots, and of the crystal springs,
Which did not stop their courses ; and the sun,
Which still, he thanked him, yielded him his
light,

Then took he up his garland, and did show
What every flower, as country people hold,
Did signify ; and how all, ordered thus,
Expressed his grief : And, to my thoughts, did read

The prettiest lecture of his country art
That could be wished. I gladly entertained him ,
Who was as glad to follow, and have got
The trustiest, loving'st, and the gentlest boy,
That ever master kept. Him will I send
To wait on you, and bear our hidden love."

BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER.

Thus did the gentle boy mitigate his grief by turning an emblematic wreath into a mute expression of it.

“Give sorrow words : the grief, that does not speak,
Whispers the o’er-fraught heart, and bids it break,”

Says Malcom to the bereaved husband and father, in “Macbeth,”—and this poor orphan had hit upon a mode of giving his sorrow words, more touching, perhaps, than a more loud and violent utterance could have been. Another bard has given us an example of the power which he attributes to flowers for allaying the tempest of grief, rage, and hate, passions which sometimes meet and struggle for mastery in the human bosom, rendering him whom they controul speechless, and sullen as the cloud before the rattling thunder and the vivid lightning breaks forth, to scathe and destroy. In “The Bride of Abydos,” Selim, after listening to the taunts and reproaches of old Giaffir, stands thus moody and silent, a prey to these contending passions, when :—

“ To him Zuleika's eye was turned,
But little from his aspect learned ;

Thrice paced she slowly through the room,
And watched his eye—it still was fixed :
She snatched the urn, wherein was mixed
The Persian Atar-gul's perfume,
And sprinkled all its odours o'er
The pictured roof and marbled floor :
The drops, that through his glittering vest
The playful girl's appeal addressed,
Unheeded o'er his bosom flew,
As if that breast were marble too.
'What sullen yet ? it must not be—
Oh ! gentle Selim this from thee ?'
She saw in curious order set
The fairest flower of Eastern land—
'He loved them once—may touch them yet
If offered by Zuleika's hand.'
The childish thought was hardly breathed
Before the rose was plucked and wreathed ;
The next fond moment saw her seat
Her fairy form at Selim's feet :
This rose, to calm my brother's cares,
A message from the Bulbul bears ;
It says to-night he will prolong,
For Selim's ear his sweetest song ;
And though his note is somewhat sad,
He'll try for once a strain more glad,

With some faint hope his altered lay
May sing these gloomy thoughts away.

He lived—he breathed—he moved—he felt ;
He raised the maid from where she knelt ;
His trance was gone—his keen eye shone
With thoughts that long in darkness dwelt ;
With thoughts that burn—in rays that melt.”

BYRON.

Let us present our readers with another picture, somewhat similar to the first, only that the grief is here deeper and more irremediable ; a maiden ruined and betrayed, goes mad ; she is a mother without lawful claims on him who should protect her, and her babe is left to perish on “a hoary cliff that watched the sea,” and so,—

“ She lived on alms, and carried in her hand
Some withered stalks she gathered in the spring ;
When any asked the cause, she smiled and said
They were her sisters, and would come and watch
Her grave when she was dead. She never spoke
Of her deceased father, mother, home,
Or child, or heaven, or hell, or God, but still

In lonely places walked, and ever gazed
Upon the withered stalks, and talked to them ;
Till wasted to the shadow of her youth,
With woe too wide to see beyond, she died."

POLLOCK

These withered stalks were to her as beautiful and full of perfume as when they were first plucked, and she regarded them as the friends of her youth, talking to them, and receiving answers—words of love and affection. We are here reminded of poor Ophelia, who in her madness made "fantastic garlands"

"Of crow-flowers, nettles, daisies, and long purples."

Of which it has been observed that they are all emblematic flowers, the first signifying Fair Maid; the second, stung to the quick; the third, her virgin bloom; the fourth, under the cold hand of death; and the whole being wild flowers, might denote the bewildered state of her faculties.

"It would be difficult," says the author of this observation, "to find a more emblematic wreath for this interesting victim of disappointed love and filial sorrow." This is only one of many instances in which our greatest poet has displayed his fondness for flowers, and his delicate appreciation of their uses and similitudes. We have another in the "Winter's Tale," where he makes Perdita give flowers to her visitors appropriate to, and symbolical of, their various ages. See Act 4, Scene 3.

The mystical Language of Flowers, as applied to the passions and sentiments, appears to have had its rise in those sunny regions where the rose springs spontaneously from its native soil, and the jessamine and the tube-rose fill with beauty and perfume alike the garden and the wilderness :—

" Know ye the land of the cedar and vine,
Where the flowers ever blossom, the beams ever shine,
Where the light wings of Zephyr, oppressed with perfume,
Wax faint o'er the gardens of Gul in her bloom ;
Where the citron and orange are fairest of fruit,
And the voice of the nightingale never is mute ;
Where the tints of the earth, and the hues of the sky
In colours though varied, in beauty may vie,
And the purple of ocean is deepest in dye ;

Where the virgins are soft, as the roses they twine,

And all, save the spirit of man is divine?"

BYRON.

"Certainly," says a writer in the Edinburgh Magazine of 1818, "the influence of this land of the sun has been felt by the pilgrims from our colder climes, and they have presented to us a pleasing fable in the Language of Flowers, and our imaginations have received with delight the descriptions and interpretations with which we have been favoured from time to time. We have dwelt on, till we have become enamoured of the delicate mode of expressing the rise and progress of love by the gift of the tender rose-bud, or the full-blown flower. We have pitied the despair indicated by a present of myrtle interwoven with cypress and poppies, and we believe that these emblems will never cease to convey some similar sentiments, wherever poetry is cultivated or delicacy understood."—The same author continues, "But," Oh, reader, mark that "but," 'tis a frightful word, is it not? ever coming to dissipate some bright dream, to scare some beautiful phantom of the imagination from our presence, and to guide our wandering feet back into the world of cold reality, where—

“The mute expression of sweet nature’s voices,
Are drowned amid the turmoil of life’s noises;
Where thoughts of fear and darkness come unbidden,

And love and hope are into silence chidden.”

H. G. A.

“But we fear that the Turkish ‘Language of Flowers,’ which Lady Montague first made popular in this country, has little claim to so refined an origin, as either purity or the delicacy of passion. We had been taught to believe that it served as a means of communication between the prisoners of the harem and their friends or lovers without; but how could it be thus used, when the emblematic nosegay must convey as much intelligence to the guardians and fellow prisoners of one of the parties as to the party herself? The truth appears to be that the ‘Language of Flowers’ and other inanimate objects has arisen in the idleness of the harem, from the desire of amusement and variety which the ladies shut up there, without employment, and without culture, must feel. It answers the purpose of enigmas, the solution of which amuses the vacant hours of the Turkish ladies, and is founded on a sort of crambo or boua rime of which M. HAMMER has given not less than an hundred specimens." We quote one of the specimens given by this ingenious Frenehman, in the Turkish and English languages :—

"Armonde—wer bana bir Ominde."

"Pear—let me not Despair."

This, though not strictly floral, is the most manageable as regards the translation that could be hit upon, and we have therefore chosen it. Sometimes a word has various meanings, as various sentences rhyme with it ; for instance :

"Rose—you smile, but still my anguish grows,
Rose—for thee my heart with love still glows."

Sometimes a double rhyme belongs to a single word, as :—

“Tea—You are both sun and moon to me,
Your’s is the light by which I see.”

And oftentimes two flowers combined may form a stanzas, as :—

“The opening rose-bud shows how pure
My love for thee, thou charming maid;
The pink, alas! thy proud disdain,
With which my ardent passion’s paid.”

By the above examples, it will be seen that there is nothing on earth, in air or water, to which a meaning may not be attached, but these meanings are very arbitrary, depending more upon the sound of words, which will rhyme with the object named, than on any real or fancied similarity of significance in their nature or properties. But what a heresy is it to call this system of arbitrary meanings the “Language of Flowers;” what a departure from that only true faith, the principal tenet of which is a firm and fervent belief in the significance of nature! If God speaks in the elements—and who shall doubt?—if the winds, and the waves, and the loud rattling thunders testify of his power and majesty, do not the forest trees also, and the grasses of the fields, and the beautiful blossoms which adorn like living gems, the bosom of the earth,—have not these voices—voices of instruction, and reproof, and sympathy, and love, and all that is most gentle and benign? Assuredly they have! Let us then look upon them not as mere playthings of an idle hour,—as gauds and decorations for the frivolous and vain, but as something too sacred to be made the symbols of false sentiments and feigned, or evil passions. But reverently address them thus:—

“Ye flowers of beauty, pencilled by the hand
Of God, who annually renews your birth,
To gem the virgin robes of nature chaste,
Ye smiling-featured daughters of the sun!
Fairer than queenly bride by Jordan’s stream.
Leading your gentle lives retired, unseen,
Or on the sainted cliffs of Zion’s hill
Wandering, and holding with the heavenly dew
In holy revelry, your nightly loves,
Watched by the stars, and offering every morn
Your incense grateful both to God and man.”

POLLOK.

Truly the real "Language of Flowers" is no system of unmeaning similitudes ; there is a deeper significance attached to every plant and flower, indeed to every object in nature, than the mere sensualist or shallow sentimentalist would imagine ; and here are the words of one who has studied them deeply, and knows that they are types and characters of the glorious revelation, second only to that direct one which God has given us in the Bible. What says he ?—

"Listen to the words of wisdom,
Uttered by the tongue of truth,
Tottering age and manly vigour,
Listen ye—and smiling youth."—H. G. A.

"Books are great and glorious agents of civilization and happiness. They are the silent teachers of mankind, filling the mind with wisdom, and strengthening the understanding for the strife of action ; making us powerful and gentle, wise and humble, at the same time. But we cannot be always buried in our books ; we must sometimes go out into the sunshine, and it is necessary, in order to enjoy our books, that we should also enjoy the privilege of air and light, drinking in health and vigour, to enable us to make the best and most profitable use of our sedentary hours. In direct opposition then to books, or rather in secret combination with them, we would place flowers—the out-of-door books Nature has so liberally provided for us, in so rich a variety of types and bindings, as to leave us no excuse for not gratifying our individual tastes. The lover of flowers has this advantage over the lover of books, that he can never be at a loss for variety; but we suspect the classification is somewhat arbitrary, and that there is hardly any one who loves the one, who does not also love the other. The best way to enjoy either is to enjoy both; to take them alternately, so that they may relieve and show off each other to the best advantage. A walk in an open field, and one hour spent in gathering wild flowers, to be afterwards grouped into a vase upon the library table, is by no means the least suggestive preparation for a morning's reading."—Yes, and then, as we inhale their balmy freshness, and look upon their beautiful hues, we shall think of the spots in which we have gathered them, and our spirits will become invigorated, our thoughts more penetrating, and our minds strengthened for the work before us :—

“ Come, let us make a sunny world around thee
Of thought and beauty ! Here are books and flowers,
With spells to loose the fetter which hath bound thee—
The ravell'd coil of this world's feverish hours.

The soul of song is in these deathless pages,
Even as the odour in the flower enshrin'd ;
Here the crown'd spirits of departed ages
Have left the silent melodies of mind.

* * * *

Listen, oh, listen ! let their high words cheer
thee !
Their swan-like music ringing through all woes ;
Let my voice bring their holy influence near
thee—
The Elysian air of their divine repose !

Or, would's't thou turn to earth? Not earth all furrowed

By the old traces of man's toil and care,
But the green peaceful world, that never sorrowed,
The world of leaves, and dews, and summer air.

Look on these flowers! As o'er an altar shedding O'er Milton's page, soft light from coloured urns!

They are the links, man's heart to nature wedding,

When to her breast the prodigal returns.

They are from lone wild places, forest-dingles,
Fresh bank of many a low-voiced hidden stream,

Where the sweet star of eve looks down, and mingles

Faint lustre with the water-lily's gleam.

They are from where the soft winds play in gladness

Covering the turf with pearly blossom-showers;
Too richly dowered, oh! friend are we for sadness,—

Look on an empire—mind and nature—ours!"

THE LANGUAGE OF FLOWERS.

BY J. G. PERCIVAL.

IN Eastern lands they talk in flowers,
And they tell in a garland their loves and cares ;
Each blossom that blooms in their garden
bowers,
On its leaves a mystic language bears.

The Rose is a sign of Joy and Love,—
Young blushing Love in its earliest dawn ;
And the mildness that suits the gentle dove,
From the Myrtle's snowy flower is drawn.

Innocence shines in the Lily's bell,
Pure as the heart in its native heaven ;
Fame's bright star and Glory's swell,
In the glossy leaf of the Bay are given.

The silent, soft, and humble heart,
In the Violet's hidden sweetness breathes ;
And the tender soul that cannot part,
A twine of Evergreen fondly wreathes.

The Cypress that daily shades the grave,
Is Sorrow that mourns her bitter lot ;
And Faith that a thousand ills can brave,
Speaks in thy blue leaves—Forget-me-not.

Then gather a wreath from the garden bowers,
And tell the wish of thy heart in flowers.

THE LANGUAGE OF FLOWERS.

BY C. F. HOFFMAN.

TEACH thee their language? sweet, I know no tongue,
No mystic art those gentle things declare,
I ne'er could trace the schoolman's trick among Created things so delicate and rare :

Their language ? Prythee ! why they are themselves

But bright thoughts syllabled to shape and hue,

The tongue that erst was spoken by the elves,
When tenderness as yet within the world was new.

And oh, do not their soft and starry eyes—

Now bent to earth, to heaven now meekly
pleading,

Their incense fainting as it seeks the skies,

Yet still from earth with freshning hope receding—

Say, do not these to every heart declare,

With all the silent eloquence of truth,

The language that they speak is Nature's prayer,

To give her back those spotless days of youth ?

THE ALBANIAN LOVE-LETTER.

BY LEIGH HUNT.

AN exquisite invention this,
Worthy of Love's most honied kiss,
This art of writing billet-doux
In buds, and odours, and bright hues,—
In saying all one feels and thinks,
In clever daffodils and pinks,
Uttering (as well as silence may)
The sweetest words the sweetest way :
How fit, too, for the lady's bosom,
The place where billet-doux repose 'em,

How charming in some rural spot,
Combining love with garden plot,
At once to cultivate one's flowers
And one's epistolary powers,
Growing one's own choice words and fancies
In orange tubs, and beds of pansies ;
One's sighs and passionate declarations
In odorous rhet'ric of carnations ;

Seeing how far one's stocks will reach ;
Taking due care one's flowers of speech
To guard from blight as well as bathos,
And watering, every day, one's pathos.

A letter comes just gathered, we
Doat on its tender brilliancy ;
Inhale its delicate expression
Of balm and pea ; and its confession,
Made with as sweet a maiden blush
As ever morn bedow'd in bush ;
And then, when we have kissed its wit,
And heart, in water putting it,
To keep its remarks fresh, go round,
And with delighted hands compose
Our answer, all of lily and rose,
Of tuberosé and of violet,
And little darling (mignonette) ;
And gratitude and polyanthus,
And flowers that say, " Felt never man thus !"

THE FLOWER GIRL.

BY MRS. CORBOLD.

COME buy, come buy my mystie flowers,
All ranged with due consideration,
And culled in fancy's fairy bowers,
To suit each age and every station.

For those who late in life would tarry,
I've Snowdrops, winter's children cold ;
And those who seek for wealth to marry,
May buy the flaunting Marigold.

I've Ragwort, Ragged Robins, too,
Cheap flowers for those of low condition ;
For Bachelors I've Buttons blue ;
And Crown Imperials for ambition.

For sportsmen keen, who range the lea,
I've Pheasant's Eye, and sprigs of Heather ;
For courtiers with the supple knee,
I've Parasites and Prince's-Feather.

For thin, tall fops, I keep the Rush,
For peasants still am Nightshade weeding ;
For rakes, I've Devil-in-the-Bush,
For sighing Strephons, Love-lies-Bleeding.

But fairest blooms affection's hand
For constancy and worth disposes,
And gladly weaves at your command,
A wreath of Amaranths and Roses.

TO VICTORIA.

BY MISS LONDON.

V—IOLET, grace of the vernal year,
Offered be thou to this spring-like reign,
Is not thy tint to that Lady dear,
Whose banner of blue is the lord of the main?

I—vy, we twine of changeless green,
Constant for ever in leaf and bough ;
So may the heart of our gentle queen,
Be always verdant and fresh as now.

C—arnation, laced with many a streak
Of blooming red on its leaflets bright,
May be a type of her mantling cheek,
Blent with a brow of pearly white.

T—ansy, though humble an herb it be,
Look not upon it with scornful eye;
On virtue that lurks in low degree,
A glance should fall kind from those on high.

O—live, thy branch, dove-borne, o'er the foam,
Was a sign for the surges of death to cease;
So from the lips of our dove should come
The soft, but the sure command of peace.

R—oses of England, ceasing from fight,
Twine round her brow, in whose veins are met
The princely blood those roses unite
In the veins of the noblest Plantagenet.

I—ris, to thee, the maid of the bow
That promises hope her name has given ;
Join then the wreath at her feet we throw,
Who beams as a symbol of hope from Heaven.

A—nemone, flower of the wind, is the last
We cull, and our garland is now complete ;
Gentle the current, and soft be the blast,
Which VICTORIA the queen of the ocean shall meet.

LINES ON FLOWERS.

BY PATTERSON.

FLOWERS are the brightest things which earth
On her broad bosom loves to cherish ;
Gay they appear as children's mirth,
Like fading dreams of hope they perish.

In every clime, in every age,
Mankind have felt their pleasing sway ;
And lays to them have deek'd the page
Of moralist—and minstrel gay.

By them the lover tells his tale,
They can his hopes his fears express ;
The maid, when words or looks would fail,
Can thus a kind return confess,

They wreath the harp at banquets tried,
With them we crown the crested brave ;
They deck the maid—adorn the bride—
Or form the chaplets for her grave,

THE POSIE.

BY ROBERT BURNS.

O LUVE will venture in where it daurna weel
be seen ;
O Luve will venture in where wisdom aince has been ;
But I will down yon river, amang the woods
sae green,—
And a' to pu' a posie to my ain dear May.

The Primrose I will pu', the firstling of the year,

And I will pu' the Pink, the emblem o' my
dear ;

For she's the pink o' woman kind, and blooms without a peer—

And a' to be a posie to my ain dear May.

I will pu' the budding Rose, when Phœbus
peeps in view,

For it's like a baumy kiss o' her sweet bonnie mou' ;

The Hyacinth's for constancy, wi' its unchanging blue—

And a' to be a posie to my ain dear May.

The Lily it is pure, and the Lily it is fair,
And in her lovely bosom I'll place the Lily
there ;

The Daisy for simplicity, and unaffected air—

And a' to be a posie to my ain dear May.

The Hawthorn I will pu', wi' its locks o'
siller grey,
Where, like an aged man, it stands at break
o' day ;
But the songster's nest within the bush, I
winna tak away—
And a' to be a posie to my ain dear May.

The Woodbine I will pu' when the evening star is near,
And the diamond draps o' dew shall be her
een sae clear ;
The Violet's for modesty, which weel she fa's to wear—
And a' to be a posie to my ain dear May.

I'll tie the posie round wi' the silken band of love.
And I'll place it in her breast, and I'll swear
by a' above,
That to my latest draught o' life the band shall ne'er remove—
And this shall be a posie to my ain dear May.

THE DIALOGUE.

FROM THE FRENCH OF CHRISTINE DE PISES.

L' Amant.

I SELL to thee the Autumn Rose
Let it say how dear thou art ;
All my lips dare not disclose,
Let it whisper to thy heart ;
How Love draws my soul to thee,
Without language thou may'st see.

La Dame.

I sell to thee the Aspen-leaf,
'Tis to show I tremble still,
When I muse on all the grief
Love can cause, if false or ill :
How too many have believed,
Trusted long and been deceived.

L' Amant.

I sell to thee a Rosary,
Proving I am only thine ;
By its sacred mystery,
I to thee each thought resign :
Fairest, turn thee not away,
Let thy love my faith repay.

La Dame.

I sell to thee a Parrot bright,
With each colour of the sky,
Thou art formed to charm the sight,
Learned in softest minstrelsy ;
But to love I am unknown,
Nor can understand its tone.

L' Amant.

I sell to thee a faded Wreath,
Teaching thee, alas ! too well,
How I spent my latest breath,
Seeking all my truth to tell ;
But thy coldness bade me die
Victim of thy cruelty.

La Dame.

I sell to thee the Honey-flower,
Courteous, best, and bravest knight,
Fragrant in the summer shower,
Shrinking from the sunny light :
May it not an emblem prove
Of untold, but tender love ?

HOLY FLOWERS.

BY MARY HOWITT.

Mindful of the pious festivals which our church prescribes, I have sought to make these charming objects of floral nature, the time-pieces of my religious calendar, and the mementoes of the hastening period of my mortality. Thus I can light the taper to our Virgin Mother on the blowing of the white snow-drop, which opens its floweret at the time of Candlemas ; the lady's smock, and the daffodil, remind me of the Annunciation ; the blue harebell, of the Festival of St. George ; the ranunculus of the Invention of the Cross ; the scarlet lychnis, of St. John the Baptist's day ; the white lily, of the Visitation of our Lady ; and the Virgin's bower, of her Assumption ; and Michaelmas, Martimas, Holyrood, and Christmas, have all their appropriate monitors. I learn the time of the day from the shutting of the blossoms of the Star of Jerusalem and the Dandelion, and the hour of the night by the stars.

A FRANCISCAN.

Ah ! simple-hearted piety,
In former days such flowers could see
The peasant, wending to his toil,
Beheld him deck the leafy soil ;
They sprung around his cottage door ;
He saw them on the heathy moor ;
Within the forest's twilight glade,
Where the wild deer its covert made ;
In the green vale remote and still,
And gleaming on the ancient hill.
The days are distant now—gone by
With the old times of minstrelsy ;
When all unblest with written lore,
Were treasured up traditions hoar ;
And each still lake and mountain lone,
Had a stern legend of its own ;
And hall, and cot, and valley-stream,
Were hallowed by the minstrel's dream.

Then, musing in the woodland nook
Each flower was as a written book,
Recalling, by memorial quaint,
The holy deed of martyred saint ;
The patient faith, which, unsubdued,
Grew mightier, tried through fire and blood :
One blossom, 'mid its leafy shade,
The virgin's purity pourtrayed ;
And one, with cup all crimson dyed,
Spoke of a Saviour crucified ;
And rich the store of holy thought
The little forest-flower brought,
Doctrine and miracle whate'er
We draw from books, was treasured there :
Faith, in the wild woods tangled bound,
A blessed heritage had found ;
And Charity and Hope were seen
In the lone isle, and wild ravine.
Then pilgrims, through the forest brown,
Slow journeying on from town to town,
Halting 'mong mosses green and dank,
Breathed each a prayer before he drank
From waters by the pathway side ;
Then duly, morn and eventide,
Before these ancient crosses grey,

Now mould'ring silently away,
Aged and young devoutly bent
In simple prayer—how eloquent !
For each good gift man then possessed
Demanded blessing, and was blest.

What though in our pride's selfish mood
We hold those times as dark and rude,
Yet give we, from our wealth of mind,
Most grateful feeling, or refined ?
And yield we unto Nature aught
Of loftier, or of holier thought,
Than they who gave sublimest power
To the small spring, and simple flower ?

DEVOTIONAL EXCITEMENTS.

BY WORDSWORTH.

WHERE will they stop, those breathing Powers,
The spirits of the new-born flowers ?
They wander with the breeze, they wind
Where'er the streams a passage find ;
Up from the native ground they rise
In mute, aerial harmonies,

From humble violet, modest thymo
Exhaled, the essential odours elimb,
As if no space below the sky
Their subtle flight could satisfy :
Heaven will not tax our thoughts with pride,
If like ambition be their guide.

THE FLOWER SPIRITS.

ANON.

WE are the spirits that dwell in the flowers ;
Ours is the exquisite music that flies,
When silence and moonlight reign over the
bowers,
That bloom in the glory of tropical skies.
We woo the bird with his melody glowing,
To leap in the sunshine and warble its strain ;
And ours is the odour, in turn, that bestowing,
The songster is paid for his music again.

There dwells no sorrow where we are abiding ;

Care is a stranger, and troubles us not ;

And the winds, as they pass, when too hastily riding,

We woo, and they tenderly glide o'er the spot.

They pause, and we glow in their rugged embraces,

They drink our warm breath, rich with odour and song.

Then hurry away to their desolate places,

And look for us hourly, and think of us long.

Who of the dull earth that is moving around
us

Would ever imagine, that, nursed in a rose,
At the opening of Spring our destiny found us Close prisoned, until the first bud should unclose ;

Then, as the dawning of light breaks upon us,

Our ringlets of silk we unfold to the air,
And leap off in joy to the music that won us,
And made us the tenants of climates so fair.

THE FLOWER SPIRIT.

BY CHARLES SWAIN.

WHEN earth was in its golden prime,
Ere grief or gloom had marred its hue,
And Paradise, unknown to crime,
Beneath the love of angels grew,
Each flower was then a spirit's home,
Each tree a living shrine of song ;
And, oh ! that ever hearts could roam,—
Could quit for sin that seraph throng !

But there the spirit lingers yet,
Though dimness o'er our visions fall ;
And flowers that seem with dew-drops wet,
Weep angel-tears for human thrall ;
And sentiments and feelings move
The soul, like oracles divine ;
And hearts that ever bowed to love,
First found it by the flowers' sweet shrine.

A voiceless eloquence and power,
Language that hath in life no sound,
Still haunts, like Truth, the spirit-flower
And hallows even Sorrow's ground.
The wanderer gives it Memory's tear.
Whilst Home seems pictured on its leaf ;
And hopes, and hearts, and voices dear,
Come o'er him—beautiful as brief.

'Tis not the bloom, though wild or rare,
It is the spirit power within,
Which melts and moves our souls, to share
The Paradise we here might win.
For heaven itself around us lies,
Not far, nor yet our reach beyond.
And we are watched by angels' eyes,
With hope and faith still fond.

I well believe a spirit dwells
Within the flower ! least changed of all,
That of the passed Immortal tells—
The glorious meads before man's fall ;
Yet, still, though I should never see
The mystic grace within it shine—
Its essence is sublimity,
Its feeling all divine..

FIELD FLOWERS.

FROM BLACKWOOD'S MAGAZINE.

FLOWERS of the field, how meet ye seem
Man's frailty to pourtray,
Blooming so fair in morning's beam,
Passing at eve away ;
Teach this, and—oh ! though brief your reign
Sweet flowers ye shall not live in vain.

Go, form a monitory wreath
For youth's unthinking brow ;
Go, and to busy mankind breathe
What most he fears to know ;
Go, strew the path where age doth tread,
And tell him of the silent dead.

But whilst to thoughtless ones and gay,
Ye breathe those truths severe,
To those who droop in pale decay,
Have ye no words of cheer ?
Oh, yes ! we weave a double spell,
And death and life betoken well.

Go, then, where wrapt in fear and gloom

Fond hearts and true are sighing,

And deem with emblematic bloom

The pillow of the dying ;

And softly speaking, nor speaking in vain,

Of the long sleep and broken chain.

And say, that he who from the dust

Recalls the slumbering flower,

Will surely visit those who trust

His mercy and his power ;

Will mark where sleeps their peaceful clay,

And roll, ere long, the stone away.

FLORAL CEREMONIES.

“Bring, FLORA, bring thy treasures here,
The pride of all the blooming year,
And let me thence a garland frame.”

SHENSTONE.

“THE worship of FLORA,” says MR. PHILLIPS, among the heathen nations, may be traced up to very early days. She was the object of religious veneration among the Proecians and the Sabines, long before the foundation of Rome ; and the early Greeks worshipped her under the name of CHLORIS. The Romans instituted a festival in honour of FLORA as early as the time of Romulus, as a kind of rejoicing at the appearance of the blossoms, which they welcomed as the harbingers of fruits. The festival games of FLORALIA were not, however, regularly instituted until five hundred and sixteen years after the foundation of Rome, when on consulting the celebrated books of the Sybil, it was ordained that the feast should be annually kept up on the 28th day of April, that is four days before the calends of May."—Bounteous May!—

" Woods and groves are of thy dressing,
Hill and dale doth boast thy blessing."

As MILTON sings, but we shall have much to say of our modern "Feast of Flowers," which, doubtless had its origin in that above spoken of, and which was introduced by the Roman conquerors into Britain.

" O! fairest of the fabled forms; that stream,
Dressed by wild Fancy, through the poets dream,
Still may thy attributes of leaves and flowers,
Thy gardens rich, and shrub o'ershadowed bowers,
And yellow meads, with spring's first honours
 bright,
The child's gay heart, and frolic step invite;
And while the careless wanderer explores
Th' umbrageous forest or the rugged shores,
Climbs the green down or roams the broom-clad waste,
May Truth and Nature form his future taste!

Goddess ! on youth's blest hours thy gifts bestow ;
 Bind the fair wreath on virgin Beauty's brow,
 And still may Fancy's brightest flowers be wove
 Round the gold chains of hymeneal love."

CHARLOTTE SMITH.

It is thus that an English poetess apostrophizes the Goddess FLORA, who according to classical authority, was "married to ZEPHYRUS, and received from him the privilege of presiding over flowers and enjoying perpetual youth."—She was represented by OVID and others as crowned with flowers, and holding in her hand the horn of plenty ; perhaps we can find her portait among our collection of poetic beauties. Ah ! here it is !—

"The vision comes !—while slowly melt away
 Night's hovering shades before the eastern ray,
 Ere yet declines the morning's humid star,
 Fair Fancy brings her ; in her leafy car
 Flora descends to dress the expecting earth,
 Awake the germs, and call the buds to birth ;
 Bids each hybernacle its cell unfold,
 And open silken leaves and eyes of gold.

Of forest foliage, of the firmest shade,
 Enwove by magic hands, the car was made ;
 Oak and the maple plane without entwined,
 And beech and ash the verdant concave lined ;

The saxifrage, that snowy flowers emboss,
Supplied the seat ; and of the mural moss
The velvet footstool rose, where lightly rest
Her slender feet in cypripedium dressed.
The tufted rush that bears a silken crown,
The floating feathers of the thistle's down,
In tender hues of rainbow lustre dyed,
The airy texture of her robe supplied ;
And wild convolvuli, yet half unblown,
Formed, with their wreathing buds, her simple zone ;

Some wandering tresses of her radiant hair
Luxuriant floated on the enamoured air ;
The rest were by the scandix points confined,
And graced, a shining knot, her head behind—
While as a spectre of supreme command,
She waved the anthoxanthum in her hand."

CHARLOTTE SMITH.

We wish that our space permitted us to quote the description of the attendants of the beautiful Goddess of Flowers from the same poem, and the exquisite forms of perfumed loveliness which the earth and the waters put forth to welcome her approach, but the poet of Lusitania is waiting to tell us how,—

"ZEPHYR and FLORA emulous conspire
 To breathe their graces o'er the field's attire ;
 The one gives healthful freshness, one the hue,
 Fairer than e'er creative pencil drew.
 Pale as the lovesick hopeless maid they dye
 The modest violet ; from the curious eye :
 The modest violet turns her gentle head,
 And by the thorn weeps o'er her lowly bed :
 Bending beneath the tears of pearly dawn,
 The snow-white lily glitters o'er the lawn ;
 Lo ! from the bough reclines the damask rose,
 And o'er the lily's milk-white bosom glows ;
 Fresh in the dew, far o'er the painted dales,
 Each fragrant herb her sweetest scent exhales."

CAMOENS.

We must now pause to describe how

"POMONA, fired with rival envy, views
 The glaring pride of FLORA's darling hues,"

And endeavours to outvie their beauty and fragrance with her own luscious productions, but turn to the author of "the Task,"—Listen to him !—Oh, lady readers !—

The spleen is seldom felt where FLORA reigns,
 The low'ring eye, the petulance, the frown,
 And sullen sadness that o'ershade, distort,
 And mar the face of beauty, when no cause
 For such immeasurable woe appears : .

These FLORA banishes, and gives the fair
Sweet smiles, and bloom less transient than her own."

COWPER.

From the ROMAN ANTIQUITIES we learn, that
"Among the Latins, a bride on her wedding-day was dressed in a long white robe with a purple fringe ; her face was covered with a red veil, and her head was crowned with flowers. On arriving at the house of her husband, she found woollen fillets round the door-posts
which were adorned with flowers, and anoint-ed with the fat of wolves to avert enchantment."

"I oft have seen upon a hridal day,
Full many maids elad in their best array,
In honour of the hride, come with their flaskets
Filled full of flowers ; others in wicker haskets.
Bring from the marish rushes to o'erspread
The ground, whereon to church the lovers tread ;
Whilst that the quaintest youth of all the train
Ushers the way with many a piping strain."

WILLIAM BROWNE.

Says our old pastoral poet, in allusion to this custom, as still followed in comparatively modern times, though to us the period of which he writes may be spoken of as "long, long ago." In a similar strain sings DRAYTON, who gives a picturesque description of the Marriage of the Thames and Isis. Another of the Company of Singers of the Elizabethan era, makes this playful allusion in his Epithalamium :—

"Now busie maydens, strew sweet flowres,
Much like our bride in virgin state,—
Now fresh, then prest, soone dying ;
The death is sweet, and must be yours,
Time goes on crutches till that date,
Birds fledged must needs be flying."

CHRISTOPHER BROOKE.

Then again, in the play of "the Two Noble Kinsmen," we find a very sweet bridal-song, beginning thus :—

"Roses, their sharp spines being gone,
Not royal in their smells alone,
But in their hue ;
Maiden-pinks, of odours taint,
Daises, smell-less, yet most quaint,
And sweet rhyme true.

“ Primrose, first-born child of ver,
Merry spring-time’s harbinger,
 With her bells dim ;
Oxlips, in their cradles growing,
Marigolds on death-beds blowing ,
 Lark-heels trim

“ All dear Nature’s children sweet,
Lye ’fore bride and bridegroom’s feet,
 Blessing their sense !
Not an angel of the air,
Bird melodious, or bird fair,
 Be absent hence.”

FLETCHER.

Even at the present day, it is quite customary with us to strew the path of the bride and bridegroom with flowers, and to offer them nosegays as they come from church : and in Wales, as in some of our rural districts, where the primitive observances have been better preserved, wreaths and garlands are worn on such occasions, and even suspended in the place of worship itself ; and to those who condemn this practice as unchristianlike, we should say in the words of BISHOP HEBER, “ If this be heathenish, Heaven help the wicked ! But I hope you will not suspect that I shall lend any countenance to this kind of ecclesiastical tyranny (which would forbid such rites and observances,) or consent to men's consciences being burdened with restrictions foreign to the cheerful Spirit of the Gospel." This was written in reference to the denouncement of a certain crown of flowers used in marriages, as "a device of Satan," and a desire expressed by an over jealous professor of Christianity, to excommunicate some young persons for wearing masks, and acting in some private rustic theatricals.

As the Greeks and Romans were lavish of flowers at their weddings, so do the modern Italians delight to use them on such occasions. Here is a picture of the preparation for a wedding at Florence, drawn by a poetic pencil :—

———" I stopped beneath the walls
Of San Mark's old cathedral halls.
I entered, and beneath the roof,
Ten thousand wax-lights burned on high,
And incense from the censurs fumed
As for some great solemnity
The white robed choristers were singing ;
Their cheerful peals the bells were ringing ;

Their deep voiced music floated round,
As the far arches sent forth sound—
The stately organ :—and fair bands
Of young girls, strowed with lavish hands,
Violets o'er the mosaic floor:
And sang while scattering the sweet store."

L. E. L.

Let us now take our readers to a northern elime, where the mighty heart of Nature yet beats warmly beneath her rugged exterior, and the bright flowers opened their perfumed chalicees in the green valley, heedless of the snow-coloured mountains which frown upon them on every side :—To Sweden, where "from the bank of the river nearest Semb, a little fleet of gaily decorated boats is pushing off. In the principal boat sits the lady of Semb, her eyes turned with quiet enjoyment now on the beautiful scenes of Nature, now on the still more beautiful objects that are nearer to her—two happy human beings. Beside her, more like a little angel than a child, sits the little Hulda ; a garland of gay flowers twined among her golden loeks. But the looks of all were turned upon the bride and bridegroom ; and they were, indeed, beautiful to look upon, So inwardly happy did they seem. Other boats contained the wedding guests. The men who rowed had all garlands on their yellow straw hats, and thus to the sounds of gay music they passed on to the chapel. This was a simple building, with no other ornament than a beautiful altar picture, and the flowers and branches of trees, with which the walls and floor were decorated in honour of the occasion."* Yes!—

“’Tis a morn for a bridal, the merry bride bell Tolls out through the woodland that skirts the chapel.”

Do you not hear it ringing? Do you not see the gay procession pass onward? and are you not aware of a delicious perfume emanating from the flowers which bestrew the way, and garlands of the merry company :—

“But other lands and other floral rites,
The thought poetic, and the pen invites.”

* Bremer's “Strife and Peace.”

In Eastern nations flowers and perfumes have been considered one of the indispensable enjoyments of the higher classes of society, from the remotest antiquity. From those nations the Romans appear to have borrowed this delicate refinement, and to have carried it to the utmost excess in their costly entertainments. They soon began to consider flowers as forming a very essential article in their festal preparations; and it is the opinion of BACCIUS, that, at their desserts, the number of their flowers far exceeded that of their fruits. The odour of flowers was thought to arouse the fainting appetite, and it certainly must have added an ethereal enjoyment to the grosser pleasure of their banquetting boards:

“Bring flowers, young flowers, for the festal board,

To wreath the cup ere the wine is poured;

Bring flowers! they are springing in wood and vale,

Their breath floats out on the southern gale,

And the touch of the sunbeam hath waked the rose,

To deck the hall where the bright wine flows.”

HEMANS.

Flowers were not only used as a stimulus to the palate, or that two senses might be gratified at one time, but it was thought that certain plants and flowers facilitated the functions of the brain, and assisted materially to neutralize the inebriating qualities of wine. Even the warriors did not hesitate to crown themselves with flowers during their principal repast. These observations are equally applicable to the Greeks, as to the Romans :—

“ Soft went the music the soft air along,
While fluent Greek, a vowel'd under-song,
Kept up among the guests, discoursing low
At first, for scarcely was the wine at flow,
But when the happy viutage touched their brains
Louder they talked, and louder came the strains.

* * * * *

Soon was god Bacchus at meridian height,
Flushed with their cheeks and bright eyes double
bright,
Garlands of every green, and every scent,
From vales deflowred, or forest trees branch-rent,
In baskets of bright osier gold were brought,
High as the handles heaped, to suit the thought

Of every guest ; that each, as he did please,
Might fancy-fit his brows, silk-pillowed at his ease."

KEATS.

HORACE, it seems, could not sit down to his bachelor's glass of wine without his garland. This lively little ode occurs at the conclusion of his first book ;—

" I tell thee, boy, that I detest
The grandeur of a Persian feast,
Not for me the Linden's rind
Shall the flowery chaplet bind.
Then search not where the curious rose
Beyond his season loitering grows ;
But beneath the mantling vine,
While I quaff the flowing wine,
The myrtle's wreath shall crown our brows,
While you shall wait and I carouse."

TRANSLATED BY FRANCIS.

"The allusion to Persia in this ode," says PHILLIPS, " confirms our idea, that the taste for flowers came to Rome from the East ; garlands were suspended at the gates or in the temples, where feasts or solemn rejoicings were held, and at all places where public joy and gaiety were desired ;" thus, in the play of "All for Love," SERAPIM says—

"Set before your doors
The images of all your sleeping fathers,
With laurels crowned ; with laurels wreath your posts,
And strew with flowers the pavement ; let the priest
Do presentsacrifice ! pour out the wine,
And call the gods to join with you in gladness."
DRYDEN.

And again, in "the Distrest Mother," we find an allusion to the floral decorations which it was customary to place in the hands of victims in the ancient sacrifices, at which the priests also appeared crowned with flowers :—

"Thus the gay victim with fresh garlands crowned,
Pleased with the sacred pipe's enlivening sound,
Through gazing crowds, in solemn state proceeds,
And dressed in fatal pomp magnificently bleeds."
PHILLIPS.

"In the annual festivals of the Terminalia, the peasants were all crowned with garlands of flowers," says CICERO, and from "Irving's Antiquities," we learn that "sacrifices among the Romans were of different kinds ; the place erected for offerings was called ara or altare, an altar ; it was erected with leaves and grass, adorned with flowers, and bound with woollen fillets." And this author further tells us, that "in the triumphal processions of Rome the streets were strewed with flowers, and the altars smoked with incense." Let us now take a picture of one of these Roman triumphs ; speaking of the Conqueror, the poet says,—

"He comes, and with a port so proud,
As if he had subdued the spacious world ;
And all Sinope's streets were filled with such
A glut of people, you would think some god
Had conquered in their cause, and them thus ranked,

That he might make his entrance on their heads !
While from the scaffolds, windows, tops of houses,
Are cast such gaudy showers of garlands down,
That e'en the crowd appear like conquerors,
And the whole city seems like one vast meadow
Set all with flowers as a clear heaven with stars."

NATHANIEL LEE.

Here is another by a modern hand :—

“ Throughout the city joyful shouts resound,
The gates are garlanded, the columns bound
With victor laurels, while from lovely hands
Sweet flowers are showered upon the martial bands

As in glad pomp the proud processions march Through many a fair arcade and trophied arch.”

AGNES STRICKLAND.

And yet one more ; it is by T. B. MACAULEY ; we are still at the “ Seven hilled city” in the time of her pristine vigour, ere she had become luxurious and effeminate : hark at the Io triumphe which swells upon the gale ! Hark to the shouts of the multitude, and the pealing of the silver-throated trumpets ! It is the feast of the twin brothers, CASTOR and POLLUX, who won for Rome the battle of the Lake Regillus :—

“ Ho, trumpets, sound a war note !

Ho, lictors clear the way !

The knights will ride, in all their pride,
Along the streets to-day.

To-day the doors and windows
Are hung with garlands all,

From Castor, in the Forum,
To Mars without the wall,

Each knight is robed in purple,
 With olive each is crowned ;
 A gallant war-horse under each
 Paws haughtily the ground.

* * * *

On ride they to the Forum,
 While laurel-boughs and flowers,
 From house-tops and from windows,
 Fall on their crests in showers.

* * * *

Unto the great Twin Brethren
 Lo ! all the people throng,
 With chaplets and with offerings,
 With music and with song.
 While flows the Yellow River,
 While stands the Sacred Hill,
 The proud Ides of Quintillis Shall have such honour still."

LAYS OF ANCIENT ROME.

On the subject of chaplets and garlands so much has been said and written, that we might fill a volume with mere quotations ; by the ancients beauty and divinity were alike crowned with them—the objects of their earthly love, and of their unearthly adoration ; they have equally graced the altar and domestic hearth ; the temple, the palace, and the cottage ; and even down to the present day, wherever shrines and images are set up as visible manifestations of things holy and invisible, there do wreaths and garlands of flowers continue to be offered and suspended ; and among those who, like ourselves, reject as sinful, or, at least quite unnecessary, all created forms and vain representations of the Deity, they are considered as the fittest ornaments of female loveliness and childish innocence ; and the most beautiful objects wherewith we can regale the senses in seasons of festivity and rejoicing. In the old ballad of “ St. George and the Dragon,” this verse occurs :—

“ Nay, stay, my dear daughter, quoth the queen,
And as thou art a virgin bright,
That hast for virtue famous been,
So let me clothe thee all in white ;
And crown thy head with flowers sweet,
An ornament for virgins meet.”

PERCY RELIQUES.

This maiden was to be offered as a propitiatory sacrifice to the Dragon, and thus, like the victim of the pagan ceremonial, went to her death with floral decorations. So, when the fair Serena was surprised by the "Savage men," and condemned to be slain,—

"The priest himself a garland did compose
Of finest flowers, and with full busie care
His bloody vessels wash and holy fire prepare.
FAIRIE QUEEN.

While those who eagerly waited the consummation of the horrid rite it is said,—

"Of few green turfes an altar soon they fayned,
And deckt it all with flowers which they nigh hand obtained."

FAIRIE QUEEN.

Then, again, are we not told of the Knight Sir Calidore, that during his tarriancee amid the shepherds, he,—

"Saw a farie damzell, which did wear a crown
Of sundry flowers, with silken ribbands tied,
Yclad in home-made greene that her own hands had dyde."

FAIRIE QUEEN.

And did not the same knight, "one day as he did range the fields abroad," behold in the midst of a goodly band of dancers, one who—

"Seemed all the rest in beauty to excell,
Crowned with a rosie garland, that right well
Did her besee me; and ever as the crew
About her daunst, sweet flowers that far did smell,
And fragrant odours they upon her threw."

FAIRIE QUEEN.

As we look upon these pictures we are transported in fancy to Arcadian fields and groves; the green valley and the sparkling rivulet are before us; the sound of the shepherd's pipe, the soft bleating of the sheep, and the drowsy hum of the wild-bees meet our ears, while the perfume of the thyme and other odoriferous plants and flowers steal over the senses with a soothing influence, like slumber; we dream, yet we are awake; we behold realities as though they were but phantoms—creatures of imagination. All is shadowy, indistinct, yet full of beauty and intelligence. Lo, you now, yon happy-looking group of men and women, laden with bright-hued blossoms and verdant boughs, piping and singing so merrily as they cross the plain. Let us question him who sits watching his sheep by the stream that glides so glassily along the foot of the green hill,—

“From whence come all these shepherd swains
And lovely nymphs attired in green?”

Hark, he answers,—

“From gathering garlands on the plains
To crown our fair, the shepherds’ queen.”

Nearer they come, yet nearer, and now the words of their song can be distinguished :—

“Bring hither the pinko and purple columbine,
With gillyflowers :
Bring sweet carnations, and sops in wine,
Worn of paramours.

Strew me the ground with daff-a-down-dillies,
And cowslips, and kingcups, and loved lilies.

The pretty paunce,
And the chevisaunce,
Shall match with the flower-de-luce."

M. DRAYTON.

Let us follow the singers through yon grove of myrtles into the open space beyond, where upon a grassy hillock, a throne is erected, of turf, overarched with boughs reft from the neighbouring trees, and literally covered with wreaths and clusters of the fairest flowers ;
and lo, the queen !—

"See where she sits upon the grassie greene,
A seemly sight !

Yclad in scarlet, like a mayden queene,
And ermines white.

Upon her head a crimson coronet,
With daffodils and damask roses set ;

Bay leaves betweene,
And primroses greene
Embellish the sweete violet."

SPENCER.

We take leave of this portion of our subject with the words of the sweetest of Spanish poets :—

"This lucid fount whose murmurs fill the mind,
The verdant forests waving with the wind ;
The odours wafted from the mead, the flowers
In which the wild bee sits and sings for hours ;
These might the moodiest misanthrope employ,
Make sound the sick, and turn distress to joy."

GRACILASSO DE LA VEGA.

DIRECTIONS.

1. A flower presented with leaves on its stem expresses affirmatively the sentiment of which it is the emblem ;—stripped of its leaves it has a negative meaning :—if the plant be flowerless, the latter is expressed by cutting the tops off the leaves.
2. When a flower, is given, the pronoun I is implied by inclining it to the left, and the word thou by inclining it to the right.
3. If an answer to a question is implied by the gift of a flower, presenting it to the right hand gives an affirmative, and to the left a negative reply
4. The position in which a flower is worn may alter its meaning—on the head it conveys one sentiment, as Caution ; on the breast another, as Remembrance or Friendship ; and over the heart a third, as Love.
5. If the flower be sent, the knot of the ribbon or silk with which it is tied should be on the left as you look at the front of the blossoms, to express I or me ; and on the front thee or thou.

Christopher Von Schmidt, author of "The Basket of Flowers," and other Tales, was a writer eminently qualified to interest, instruct, and improve the minds of all who peruse his works. Moral and religious sentiments are so judiciously, simply, and pleasingly pour-trayed throughout his writings, that the youthful searcher for entertainment, as well as the more mature student in pursuit of knowledge, will be greatly benefited by their perusal. The beauty of these Tales chiefly consists in inculcating the great fact upon the mind of the reader that love to God, entire consecration to His service, and unshaken confidence in His merciful interposition in the darkest hour, will assuredly produce happiness in this life, and the safest preparative for the life to come. As a proof of the value of the writer's productions, we assert that it is impossible to enumerate the number of copies that have issued from the press of that sweet tale—"The Basket of Flowers"—and the avidity with which it is still inquired for.

The following highly interesting Stories are well adapted to please and instruct youthful readers, and to cultivate sound moral principles, by
